Meet the new director of the Snohomish Community Foodbank, she is Elizabeth Grant, a personable young lady who has lived in here Snohomish with her two daughters since 1997. Her background is in Radio, TV, Advertising and Public Relations. Her most recent assignment was the Marketing Director with Snohomish County at the Evergreen Sate Fair where she worked for 9 years before recent cutbacks. I asked her for a short statement and she replied "I am so excited to be here and be a part of such an important contribution to our community". We wish Elizabeth all the success in her new venture!

PUMPKINS FOR ECEAP

John Bruce , October 10, 2009

Vicki Carpenter, the ECEAP director, had been our guest speaker explaining one of her programs and had indicated a need for some pumpkins. To the rescue, President Frank Spaetig and his trusty secretary Sonia delivered a batch of pumpkins to the kids at Central Elementary School. Vicki emailed this photo along with a message to the Tillicum - "You all are the BEST...I feel so blessed to know you and we are all so appreciative of the support that you continue to give the ECEAP preschoolers and their families!"

Kiwanis International CEO steps down

Kiwanis News

Kiwanis International CEO, Rob Parker, today announced his decision to step down effective October 16, 2009 in a letter to the Kiwanis family.

“Those of you who know me well will not be surprised that I am totally excited about what the future might bring for Stephanie and our family,” said Parker. “This change will allow me to accelerate my graduate studies, while continuing to write and speak on the value and importance of leadership. My time at Kiwanis has helped fuel my passion for a more global approach to leadership, and I look forward to the public speaking opportunities that lie ahead both in the United States and internationally.”

Parker continued, “Over the past three years, I have been blessed to work with some amazing volunteers and staff members. Your passion and love for others has inspired me so significantly that I will certainly smile every time I think of you. During this time together we have made progress in a number of areas, but there is still much work left to be done. Thanks to each of you for your friendship, your leadership and your commitment to children. “

Parker assumed duties as Kiwanis International’s chief executive officer in August 2006. He was responsible for providing leadership and direction to the board, staff and volunteers for the global organization of both adult and youth members totaling more than 600,000.

During his tenure, Parker instituted Project ROI (return on investment), an initiative that evaluated every program and expense within the organization, to minimize expense in any area that did not benefit the member, while at the same time freeing up resources for investment in programs that did. Kiwanis International sits in good financial shape today because of this initiative. Funds from Project ROI were immediately redirected towards new growth programs, marketing and branding initiatives and technology.

As a change agent, he began working on Kiwanis Next, an opportunity to create a Kiwanis that would be more inclusive, diverse and relevant within today’s fast changing society while upholding respect for our great history. He oversaw the creation of three internal staff teams: Global Marketing, Global Impact and Global Operations, meant to create cross-functional collaboration on global member issues related to all clubs.

Communications was a key component to Parker’s organizational strategy. He created a periodical update to Kiwanis leaders called the Kiwanis Insider, which kept over 80,000 volunteer leaders up to date on Kiwanis issues. He also created a leadership web blog and started a weekly conference call with Kiwanis International board officers.

Kiwanis Coats for Kids project helps local needy children

From Kiwanis International website

Escanaba, Michigan By Jillian Jamison

GLADSTONE - Bayshore Kiwanians are once again banding together for the club's annual Coats for Kids Project throughout the area. Public donation barrels have been set up in Gladstone at Gladstone Super Valu, and in Escanaba at Super One Foods, JC Penney, Shopko, Wal-Mart and Elmer's County Market.

Residents are asked to drop off any winter coats they no longer wear, as long as those coats are in good condition. The barrels will remain in place through Nov. 2. NuWay Cleaners and Escanaba Steam Laundry will then collect the coats for cleaning. All coats will be available for pick up from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Nov. 7, at Escanaba Middle School. There is no charge for the coats.

Bayshore Kiwanis President Bill Smith said the local Kiwanians began the Coats for Kids Project 20 years ago, because they saw the need in the area. "We came up with the idea, and it has been borrowed since that time," said Smith. "In Green Bay, they have taken the project and run with it," he noted, adding, "It's now so big that they hold distribution day at Packer Stadium."

Smith explained that every child deserves to be warm during the cold winter months, but with the economy as it is, purchasing a quality winter coat for their children is not always an option for many parents. This project takes the financial burden and emotional strain off those parents who can't afford coats for their children.

As winter weather quickly approaches, the need for adequate outerwear becomes critical, especially in this northern region. The Kiwanians' goal is to ensure a warm, healthy winter, to the extent they're able, for all area youth. The public recognizes the need for the coats, as people respond generously to the annual call for coats.

"We collected 500 coats last year," Smith recalled. "That's incredible, and it says a lot about the people of this area."

Smith also noted that once distribution day has come to a close, all leftover winter coats are delivered to the Salvation Army, where they are available to area families seeking assistance during the winter months.

"Nothing is wasted," said Smith. "These coats are very much needed, and we are grateful to all the people who donate."

Bayshore Kiwanis currently has 12 members and is seeking new members. Men and women interested in giving of themselves for the benefit of others are invited to attend the club's next meeting, which is scheduled for 8 a.m. Tuesday morning at the Family Inn.
